1. LAST MEETING OF THE YEAR

An Evening in the Torrens Valley TUESDAY, DECEMBER 2nd

A coach has been booked to leave Kintore Avenue, Adelaide (by the War Memorial) at 6.15 p.m. We will pick up our guides at the Village Green, Houghton, so that we may have a directed tour to Birdwood, which lies on the eastern boundary of the district, passing by points of interest around the Millbrook Reservoir, through the Chain-of-Ponds, Cudlee Creek, and along the Torrens Valley to Gumeracha and Birdwood. Light refreshments will be served on arrival at the Birdwood High School at 8.00 p.m. There will be a photographic display and a slide presentation illustrating the history of the District.

If members wish to take their own cars, they can meet the group at Houghton about 6.45 p.m., and then follow the coach; or they can go directly to Birdwood High School by 8.00 p.m. members living in the Eastern Suburbs might like to drive their cars to Houghton, and then join the coach for the tour. BOOKING INSTRUCTIONS OVERLEAF

IMPORTANT: If you intend going by coach (or joining the coach at Houghton) please ring Stephanie Moss, 268 5486, by Sunday 30th November. Cost of coach will be approximately $3.50 (money can be paid on the night).

2. AUSTRALIA DAY EXCURSION - MONDAY, JANUARY 26TH, 1981 *****

The National Australia Day Committee has contacted organisations and societies throughout Australia to encourage them to make a meaningful celebration of Australia Day. Your Council has therefore planned a picnic family day in the Botanic Gardens - a lunch on the lawns (bring your own sandwiches and cool drinks), followed by a tour of the gardens, and the Museum of Economic Botany, under the guidance of one of the Botanic Gardens staff members. There will also be a very interesting historical display of photographs of the Gardens in the nineteenth century, in the Museum.

This will be our first meeting for 1981 - it is one of our "few" family excursions, and we do hope members will plan to come along and give their support to this concept. The National Australia Day Committee wants to encourage patriotism and unity, not nationalism and superiority. It should be promoted as a day of "contact not of conquest" because there have been three waves of settlement that have produced the present Australians: first there was that of the aborigines, maybe 30,000 years ago; then there were the people of Anglo-Saxon culture, who arrived not yet 200 years ago; and finally, there were the European migrants after World War Two. We should "celebrate our unity as Australians and express gratitude for the heritage we have inherited".

There will be final details of this first "field trip" for 1981 in the January newsletter, which will come out early in the month. Meanwhile, note it in your diaries - January 26th in the Botanic Gardens.

3. AMENDMENTS TO OUR CONSTITUTION *****

Notice is hereby given that at our February 6th, 1981 meeting the following revised constitution will be presented for adoption. Members are asked to bring their copies of this newsletter with them. All amendments are of the nature of clarifications of the intent of our previous constitution, except that:

- 1) In clause 3 membership categories are no longer specified but are relegated entirely to the Society's Rules.
- 2) In clause 14 the procedure for amending the constitution has been clearly specified, to overcome difficulties in interpreting the previous instruction for votes to be cast as "laid down in clause 10".
- 3) In anticipation of our Incorporation "Inc." has been inserted after the title.

Please note that proposed amendments are underlined. A three-fifths majority is required to effect these changes.

4. SOUTH AUSTRALIAN JUBILEE 150 BOARD . *****

Enclosed in this newsletter is the first brochure produced by the Board inviting people from throughout the South Australian community to participate in 1986. Members may know that the Historical Society called a public meeting in October last year, of people and organisations who might be interested in preparing works for publication for the State's sesquicentenary. The South Australian Sesquicentenary Historical Publications Committee was formed, with the Society's president, Dr. Peter Howell as Chairman, and the Society's secretary, Ms Stephanie Moss as secretary. At the same time two sub-committees were formed: one for policy and finance, the other for publications. The first subcommittee approached the Government in January to initiate planning for the 150-year State celebrations. I do not think we can take the full credit, but in July the Government announced the establishment of the South Australian Jubilee 150 Board with Mr. Kym Bonython as Chairman! We were very happy that Dr. Peter Howell was appointed a member of the Board at that time.

We have been in close liaison with the Board, explaining what the S.A.S.H.P.C. was proposing to do, and learning that the Board is presently setting up eighteen executive committees to cover a wide range of activities; the executive committee of particular concern to us is the History and Conservation Committee under the Chairmanship of Mr. John Sibly. (We have, in fact, encouraged the Board to have historians on a number of appropriate executive committees.)

If our members have any ideas for the 1986 Jubilee please send them to Mr. John Mitchell, Box 1986, G.P.O., Adelaide, 5001.

On the other hand, if our members have any thoughts on publications for 1986, please fill in the form in this newsletter, which is a reproduction of the form that has gone to the S.A.S.H.P.C. members this month, so that information can be gathered and co-ordinated on proposed publications. Members may have already read in the Press that the Board, through the State Government, has granted $12,000 a year for three years to Flinders University for research on a new and comprehensive history of South Australia.

HELEN PEARCE.

5. NEW BOOKS AND OTHER PUBLICATIONS. *****

Australian Winemaking : The Roseworthy Influence

The contribution of A. R. Hickinbotham and Roseworthy Agricultural College to Winemaking in Australia.

This book by Dr. Geoffrey C. Bishop is a record of the contribution of Roseworthy Agricultural College to the Australian wine industry since 1884. The book covers the role played in the education of Australian winemakers by Professor Arthur J. Perkins, and Henry Laffer, and the contribution to the technical development of the industry of Alan R. Hickinbotham, one of Australia's earliest wine chemists. Alan Hickinbotham was instrumental in the establishment of the Roseworthy Diploma in Oenology in 1936. The list of graduates holding the R.D.Oe. reads like a "Who's Who" of the Australian wine industry.

The publication is quarto size, 344 pages, hard cloth with full colour dustcover, over 100 black and white and colour illustrations and contains an extensive bibliography and index for reference purposes. The Foreword is written by well-known winemaker and Roseworthy graduate, Brian Barry.

We recommend this publication to lovers of good Australian wines, graduates of Roseworthy Agricultural College, and to all those interested in the historical development of the Australian industry.

TWO NEW FACSIMILE EDITIONS.

FINLAYSON, H.H. The Red Centre: Man and Beast in the Heart of Australia. 1935. 52 illustrations. Folded map.

Hedley Finlayson, the Honorary Curator of Mammals in the South Australian Museum from 1926-1968, is an authority on the fauna of Central Australia.

The Red Centre is about the south-western portion of Central Australia, the Aborigines and animal life of the area. The book is the result of various expeditions into the area by the author on camel and horse, and by car. The greater part of The Red Centre originally appeared during 1932-3 in the form of separate articles and their publication as a book made the information more widely available in a more permanent form.

Since its first publication in 1935 there has been a steady demand for The Red Centre. It was twice reprinted in both 1936 and 1943, a pocket library edition was issued in 1945, and a new edition in 1952. It has been out-of-print for some time. The book, which is profusely illustrated by photographs taken by the author, has a map, an index and is well written, informative and fascinating. It is now issued as a facsimile by the Libraries Board of South Australia. Price $13 (Overseas post and packing $A2.00)

RICHARDSON, Norman A. The Pioneers of the North-West of South Australia 1856 to 1914. 1925. Profusely illustrated. Folded map. 155p.

For many years Norman Richardson held the mail contract for a huge area of the north-west of South Australia. He lived in the area for over 50 years, and his book conjures up a vivid picture of bushcraft, courage and resourcefulness among the pioneers of the area.

The many photographs of, and biographical information on, the early station owners, managers and workmen, enhance the historical value of the book. There is also a useful map of the area showing the boundaries of the stations, the names of these properties and their owners.

Richardson's Pioneers has long been out-of-print. The first facsimile edition was published by The Libraries Board of South Australia in 1969. Due to popular demand it has now been reprinted. Price $13.50 (Overseas post and packing $A2.00)

Both these publications are available from The State Librarian, The State Library of South Australia, Box 419, G.P.O., Adelaide. S.A. 5001

FROM THE UNIVERSITY OF WESTERN AUSTRALIA PRESS

Unfinished Voyages : Western Australian Shipwrecks 1622-1850. Graeme Henderson.

One hundred and fifty years before Captain Cook discovered the east coast of Australia, Dutch and English vessels were being wrecked on the rocky lee shores of the western seaboard. This book tells the story of these and all the other ships of various nationalities which suffered similar fates during the period 1622 to 1850.

Unlike many other published works on shipwrecks this book results from the work of a professional marine archaeologist whose specific aim was to present accurately and concisely a record of every ship wrecked on the Western Australia coast in this two and one quarter century time span.

For each vessel a simple format has been used giving the circumstances of the casualty, the details of the ship and, if the wreck has been found, a description of the remains. Easy to follow charts give the approximate location of most of the vessels and underwater photographs provide visual evidence of their appearance. Items found by marine archaeologists during excavation are also illustrated.

The book will provide an invaluable guide for sports divers, amateur archaeologists, coastal residents, developers and planners, those interested in maritime and Western Australian history, and social studies and history students.

Graeme Henderson was born and educated in Perth and obtained his Master of Arts degree at the University of Western Australia with a thesis on Western Australian shipping in the nineteenth century. He joined the Western Australian Museum in 1969 and is a Curator with the Department of Maritime Archaeology.

Since 1969 he has participated in extensive field work in Western Australia, commencing the colonial shipwrecks programme and directing the excavation of the Eglinton (1852), the James Matthews (1841) and an unidentified wreck at Point Cloates. He has also led an expedition to the wreck of the Pandora (1791) on the Great Barrier Reef and given archaeological direction to two seasons of excavation on the wreck of the Sydney Cove (1797) located in Bass Strait.

But Westward Look - Nursing in Western Australia 1829-1979. Victoria Hobbs

This book provides a historical record of the growth and development of nursing in Western Australia from the simple pattern of home care at first settlement to the complex situation of today. It traces the achievements of the nurses themselves in attaining professional status, and gives some pointers to future developments. The contribution of nurses to the health care of the community in each different period is also shown.

The author has attempted to create an authentic source of information for future research in nursing and allied disciplines which have had to rely greatly on avenues of doubtful accuracy, such as the oral or journalistic accounts or the memoirs of older nurses or their relatives whose memories are coloured by time. Of special interest, then, are the lists of nurses (1896-1922), the first register of midwives (1913), and the early rules and regulations of the Australasian Trained Nurses Association, for the general reader as well as for researchers and the nurses' descendants.

Victoria Hobbs did her general nursing training at Perth Hospital, graduating in 1932, and her post-basic midwifery and infant health training at K.E.M.H.

In 1939 she joined the Australian Army Nursing Service and was posted for overseas duty with the 2/4th Australian General Hospital to the Middle East - Palestine, Egypt, Western Desert (Tobruk). Later, she served in Ceylon, Australia and North Borneo.

In 1952 Miss Hobbs took the Nursing Diploma course at the College of Nursing, Australia.

Formerly a council member of the R.A.N.F., Miss Hobbs was given distinguished honorary membership on retirement. She was for many years an examiner for the N.R.B., and is a fellow of the College of Nursing and a member of the W.A. State Committee.

AUSTRALIA 1788-1988: A BICENTENNIAL HISTORY.

"Massive history project under way"

Historians and other social scientists at ANU are now involved in preparing a nine-volume history of Australia which will be published in 1988 to mark the bicentenary of European settlement. Entitled Australia 1788-1988: A Bicentennial History, it is the largest co-operative history venture in Australia since the Australian Dictionary of Biography was inaugurated nearly 20 years ago.

The project was initiated in the History Department of the Research School of Social Sciences (RSSS), and several members of the School are now making major contributions. The School is also the main source so far of funding for Section A of the project, which will produce five of the nine volumes. The other volumes, comprising Section B, are funded by the University of New South Wales. In all, well over 200 people from tertiary institutions throughout Australia are participating.

Section B, with Professor Frank Crowley as general editor, is producing a series of reference volumes. These will meet a long standing need in Australian historical writing. An historical bibliography will describe the resources of major libraries, and direct readers to the best books on particular subjects. A book of historical statistics will bring together statistical information which is now fragmented and not readily accessible. The series will also include Australia's first national historical atlas, with maps illustrating everything from Aboriginal mission stations to changing electoral divisions. Finally, the reference section will produce a handy one-volume guide to Australian history.

The Section A volumes, with Professor Ken Inglis as general editor, will break new ground in the writing of Australian social history. The first volume, Australia to 1788, will be mainly concerned with the Aboriginal way of life before European settlement. John Mulvaney, Professor of Pre-history in the Faculty of Arts, is organising the 'Aboriginal component' of this volume.

The three volumes will focus on specific years: 1838, 1888, and 1938. This 'slice approach' enables researchers to analyse society in greater detail than traditional approaches which cover longer periods. Great men and grand movements give way to ordinary people and everyday patterns of behaviour. By narrowing the time scale, historians are forced to question their own perhaps long held assumptions. An added advantage is that people with diverse interests and from different disciplines can easily come together in a collective enterprise.

The final Section A volume will cover the period 1939 to 1988. This volume is in many ways the most difficult to plan, owing partly to the abundance of sources and partly to the paucity of historical work on the period.

The series is being aimed at the educated general reader. Jargon will be studiously avoided in all volumes. Carefully selected illustrations will enhance their appeal. The bicentenary offers historians an opportunity to reach a wide audience, and this opportunity should not be missed.

Soon the project will be entering a new stage, with the selection of a publisher and the appointment of volume editors.

INFORMATION WANTED

I am writing a dissertation for a Master of Education on the topic: "A history of the Children's Library Services as offered by the Institutes in South Australia from 1875 to 1940." I would be most grateful to anyone who can help me with this topic by letting me see any materials and/or documents. I would also be most interested in hearing first-hand accounts of those who used such services when they were children, particularly if they held a scholarship awarded by an Institute.

STONE MASONRY SEMINAR - Thursday, November 27, 9.00 a.m.

In recent years quite a lot of restoration work has taken place on our old stone buildings; ensuing decades will see the need for more. Will all the completed restoration work stand the test of time? Does the cleaning of stonework shorten its lifespan? Do preservatives on stone increase the lifespan? These questions and others relating to effective damp-proof courses, mortar strengths, and replacing stone, will be covered in detail during a day seminar being run by Marleston College of Further Education in conjunction with the Department of Mines and Energy on Thursday, November 27 starting at 9.00 a.m.

Speakers will include Dr. A.H. Spry, Dr. W.G. Spencer and Mr. B. Dillon from Amdel, and Mr. D.A. Young from the Dept. of Mines and Energy. Case histories of building restoration will be covered by Mr. B.G. Rowney (Old Legislative Council Building), Mr. R. D. Anesbury (Adelaide Town Hall) and special guest Mr. P. Staughton (Scots Church - Melbourne). The cost $18 per person, includes lunch and papers. All enquiries should be directed to Philip Hadley or Val Kangur at Marleston College - Tel: 352 4177.

7. BOOK REVIEW. *****

St. George's, Goodwood 1880-1980" by H.J. Harrison and J.M. Truran. 88 pages, soft cover, B. & W. photographs, $7.65

"St. George's, Goodwood" is a very readable "church history" that avoids the pitfalls of going into too much unnecessary detail, thereby lengthening a book unduly and causing the reader's attention to wander. It follows the main events of the last hundred years with clarity and a good flowing prose style, however, some might think that the book is somewhat "light-weight" regarding theological aspects, especially the "extended conflict between Fr. Wise (who was rector of the church for 40 years from 1900 to 1940) and Bishop Thomas...", which could have been explored in more detail without becoming too weighty in content.

For the function of celebrating a centenary however, without an "academic" objective, the book should have a wide appeal for all those connected in some way with the church or its college.

The book may be ordered from:- The Publications Manager, "St. George's Goodwood 1880-1980", C/o 21 Kyeema Avenue, Cumberland Park. 5041

ROUTE TAKEN BY THE GOLD ESCORT FROM WELLINGTON TO MT. BARKER.

I am writing about two Articles which appeared in the Sunday Mail by Mr. Bill Reschke; one was entitled "Women to follow the Gold", and the other, "Police Chief rode to Victoria to pull us out of the red."

The first article related; "Five young women set out tomorrow for a week-long ride to honour police troopers who saved South Australia from bankruptcy in 1853". It continued; "Gold fever comes to Wellington on the River Murray today where the 125th anniversary of the Gold Escorts is to be celebrated". With this article, published on October 22nd, 1978, was a map depicting the route taken by the Gold Escort back to Adelaide from Mt. Alexander. This trail terminated at Wellington, which seemed odd to me, as I had been informed over 50 years before that the trail continued on through "Chauncy's Line", a line of road from Wellington to Mt. Barker, surveyed by William Snell Chauncy in early 1852. I had taken this road several times in

On Saturday morning, we set off shortly after 8 taking the road to Callington and then down to Hartley. We came well prepared, pick* and shovels, saws etc., plus a good supply of water, ready to blaze our way through. Oh, what a shock we got, a beautiful metal road, with farms on each side of the road! Part has now been reserved in its natural state for Fauna. During 1927-28 when we used to go through, the road was metalled for the most part. In places the rabbits had burrowed under the sides and vehicles passing over had broken it in, which we would dodge around. Some places where the mallee was close you just had to plough through and hope for the best. Some stretches the mallee tops nearly closed over the road, being brushed aside by the windscreen while you peered through looking for "cave ins".

The entry from the Wellington road was, turn right at Mulgundawa, on to the Murray Bridge Road, proceed for a mile or little more, go through a gate on the left side fence, then skirting the edge of a salt lagoon, where there was another fence and gate to go through. There you struck the metal road, and from then on there was no fence or gate until you reached Hartley. In 1928 my brother and I with his wife went through from the Hartley end to Wellington. We asked Fred if he could name any person who would have as much knowledge as he on the subject in hand. He said there were other old persons he knew who should have as much knowledge as he, but not with good, clear minds. He said the other person he could recommend was Mr. J.B.M. Hassam of Woodchester. After reaching Mulgundawa, we went on to Wellington and then on to Langhorne's Creek where we had lunch under a big gum tree.

We then proceeded to Woodchester to contact Jack Hassam, 79. As Fred had said, his mind was as sharp as a tack. We told him our story, which he fully endorsed. On putting the question regarding the way the Escort went after leaving Hartley, which was what I wanted confirmed, I asked him if it was possible they went Callington way. "No, definitely not", said Jack "they went on through Wistow past Scrubby Hill to Mt. Barker". We bade Jack goodbye, he had driven the last nail and clinched it.

The chaps in the Lands Department were unsure of the route taken after Wellington, as there were three or more routes they could have taken. On one of the maps there was a red line drawn from Wellington to Langhorne Creek, thence through Woodchester to Mt. Barker, however, they were not sure why it had been drawn, as it was put there by some one in the past. Some assumed it depicted the Escort route from Wellington to Mt. Barker.

However this was definitely the route taken by the first escort to Wellington, as Ins. Tolmer in his memoirs related; "Inspector" Stuart will have the goodness to give directions to Police Constable Rowe to start with the police cart and three horses on March 9 inst., proceeding by easy stages to the Police Station Mosquito Plains. On his arrival put himself under the direction of Sergeant Lamb." Next day he says, "Met in with the strong spring cart at Mosquito Plains and told him to proceed forthwith to Mt. Alexander and join me". J.W. Bull in his book "Early Experiences in S.A." states, "there was no known track between this Colony and the Mt. Alexander Gold Fields". However, he got to the goldfields all right, probably by the route taken by those who had money at that time, which was not very many. They took the way the Royal Mail went, which was stagecoach to Goolwa, then by ship to Meningie, afterwards by coach through the Coorong to Robe, and thence into Victoria. Theirs was the easy way. Insp. Tolmer relates, "During the day overtook all kind of vehicles in almost every description travelling overland, many were on foot, head erect with a firm step determined to face anything that might cross their path". To illustrate this further, the river ferry at Wellington in March, 1852 carried 1,234 passengers, 1,266 horses and bullocks and 164 carriages; the ferry collected £64.14.2½.

At that time the road to the Victorian border from Wellington was being surveyed, through what we called the ninety mile desert. Tolmer called it the "100 mile scrub", as sometimes they lost sight of the surveyed pegs in the dense scrub.

On January 31st, 1852, in his report to the Police Commissioner regarding the establishment of a Mounted Police Escort to the gold diggings, he mentioned, "From the knowledge I obtained of the country when I was dispatched in 1847 by Col. Robe to lay out the present Overland Mail Line of road, I am inclined to think that a great distance might be saved by taking a more direct course, straight across the scrub from Wellington to Mt. Barker." Later he said, "As mentioned before a direct line to Mt. Alexander is only 310 miles whereas by the present line it is upwards of 400 miles". It appears the Governor and other "Heads" must have acted pretty smartly on this matter.

I haven't been able to establish the actual dates of the survey. However, at a meeting of the Central Roads Board on the 20th April, 1852, Mr. Chauncy's plan and report on the Mt. Barker to Wellington South East Road, was submitted and it was resolved: "That the line laid out by Mr. Chauncy be adopted and that application be made to His Excellency Lieutenant Governor for a sufficient sum to open it through the fenced sections." As the first Escort started on February 9th, 1852, it is safe to presume the survey by William Snell Chauncy was in the February-March period, 1852.

I would not deny that the first, and perhaps the second, escorts came from Wellington to Mt. Barker via Mosquito Creek, about the time it was known as Mosquito Plains (the name Ins. Tolmer used), and which is now known as the Langhorne's Creek area. Judging the character of the dauntless Ins. Tolmer, I feel sure he would have taken the route he had suggested and instigated at the first opportunity, which was Chauncy's Line.

In 1926, I was appointed Head Tester at Narrung which is bordered by Lake Alexandrina on one side and Lake Albert on the other. I lived in Adelaide and made the journey to and from Adelaide once a month, crossing the river at Wellington once or twice a month for sixteen years.

At that time the old people of the community would ask me, "Which way to you come and go to Adelaide?" "Straight through the scrub from Wellington to Mt. Barker", I replied. "You go the way the Gold Escort went then", it appeared to be those brought up in the hills from Mt. Barker to Macclesfield that imparted this knowledge. It was in the years 1926-1927 that I made most use of it. Although it had its hazards, it was a much better road than the road through Langhorne and Strathalbyn.

My interest has been aroused and some time soon hope to compile the history of Chauncy's Line.

9. CONSTITUTIONAL MUSEUM.

The Constitutional Museum has captured the imagination of the public and schools and, since its official opening in August, more than 15,000 visitors have viewed the Museum's 100-minute audio visual show, "Bound for South Australia." Several thousand more have visited the Museum's major exhibitions areas.

"Bound for South Australia" screens Mondays through Fridays from 10.05 a.m. every thirty five minutes till 3.20 p.m. On Saturdays and Sundays, screenings are every thirty five minutes from 1.35 p.m. to 3.20 p.m.

Admission is $2.00 for adults, 90¢ for students, pensioners and unemployed.

The Museum will be open on Wednesday evenings during January and February for members of the public. A series of four special Wednesday night screenings of "Bound for South Australia" will be held for groups of more than 20 on the nights of November 26, December 3, 10 and 17. For bookings please contact the Museum.

Currently showing in the Museum's main display area is an exhibition on the history and restoration of the former Legislative Council building. Visitors can view as well the facade of the original building on the site which was uncovered during the restoration work.

In Mid-January this exhibition will be replaced by "Votes for Women", which traces the history of women's suffrage in South Australia - the first colony to grant women voting rights in Australia.

Robin Millhouse, M.P., is the star of the current Speakers Corner display, "The Millhouse Factor", which looks at the 25-year parliamentary career of this outspoken politician. Mr. Millhouse became a member of parliament in 1955 when he won the seat of Mitcham.

"The Millhouse Factor" will run till mid-December, when it will be replaced by a display on the 1931 Beef Riot which will be put on by the Unemployed Workers' Union.

Members of the Museum staff are now working on plans for the "Come Out '81" student festival to be held next May. The Museum is planning to re-enact the 1855 election, which was the last election held under the old system of open voting before the introduction of the secret ballot and a bicameral system.

The 16 elected representatives will meet in the old House of Assembly chamber for a one-day debate to frame a constitution for South Australia.

The museum will be commissioning political and historical research and kits will be sent to participating schools. History teachers and students will do further research into specific electoral districts.

The Museum Director, Dr. Peter Cahalan, says that although the Museum does not collect artefacts, there is a need for material on political events and other happenings in South Australia in 1855.

The Museum would welcome any information on the period and it should be sent to: The Constitutional Museum, North Terrace, Adelaide.
